BACKGROUND INFO:

Jade was born in Dublin, Ireland but was raised in San Francisco. He lived with his mother Alison Mcpherson, and sister Rebecca Mcpherson. His father passed away in the line of duty when he was 10. His sister disappeared without a trace when she turned 17 and hasn't been seen since. He has devoted his life to protecting people and finding his sister. A second-generation secret service agent who graduated at the top of his class. He served for nearly one year before being assigned to a cyber crime case involving unauthorized access to the executive branch payroll, more specifically a suspicious account linked directly to the president. Jade was the lead investigator in this case leading to the suspect's arrest. Shortly after the case was officially closed he received anonymous tips that the account was being used for treasonous activities including but not limited to weapons sales and wet list contacts. About three months into his unauthorized investigation Jade went missing and presumed dead after only a three-day investigation where no apparent leads turned up. The order to terminate the investigation could only have come from the Whitehouse. "Power Supply" - After being recruited by the agency jade (now codenamed Apoc) was sent on the "Power Supply" mission. Although the mission was a success, Apoc's involvement in the untimely and messy death of Hikoratachi's sons and Hikoratachi's subsequent disappearance is still a dangerous loose end and may present complication in the future. "Brushfire" - Was pulled off the mission with no explanation given.

08/01/2006: Agent was involved in a massive explosion during "Irish Wake" mission. Agent was killed trying to help disarm a highly explosive terrorist bomb consisting of massive amounts of chemical fertilizer and an unknown liquid accelerant. The Agency has anonymously taken care of all funeral arrangements and expenses.
