BACKGROUND INFO:

The elusive Cold Zero assassin known as Char is as deadly as she is beautiful. Rumor has it that she was recruited by Cypher himself when he witnessed her execute a perfect hit in broad daylight at an outdoor cafe in Zurich. She used only a butterknife from a nearby table, as the security detail of her victim would not allow her to get close enough with a weapon. After the hit, she evaded four highly trained bodyguards and escaped into the bowels of the city.

Cypher expended an outrageous sum of money to find and bring in his "Angel of Death". Since that time, she has rarely left his side unless her skills are needed elsewhere. Mara Karoto has no family, and there is a shadowy rumor that she herself got rid of them when she was a teenager. Her only known passions are her weapons, her favorite being a flamethrower that she wields to great affect on the battlefield when stealth is no longer called for. It is probable that she is drawn to the immense fear and pain that come with exposure to burning napalm jelly.

It appears that even Cypher is a bit in awe of her bloodthirstiness, doing all that he can to stay on her good side. Char's last known romantic entanglements always end in the male or female's tortured death within a short time, making her a dedicated black widow in her shadowy world.

All care is to be taken when confronting this deadly enemy of the Agency.
