BACKGROUND INFO:

Justin Marsh is an unassuming figure who enjoys his work as a Research Consultant. Justin took to academia life and graduated with a broad range of skills. Once out of school he found that his unique academic skills, combined with his aptitude for problem solving, were in high demand. Today Justin Marsh enjoys a growing reputation as the person to contact for a unique approach to a company's technological and scientific "problem projects." Justin currently travels all over the world in this capacity.

When Mr. Marsh is not traveling the world, he retires to a rural area in New York, where he seems to live a quiet life. Looking at Mr. Marsh in his daily life, you would not think he enjoys the benefits of being a globally sought after Research Consultant. He seems to spend all of his earnings on a modest place to live, essentials, a mini-van for transportation, and the bulk towards the latest gadgetry and electronics that he can get his hands on.

Because of Mr. Marsh's unique access to various organizations and companies around the globe, and the fact that his job provides an easy cover, The Agency started efforts to recruit Justin for fieldwork. The Agency attempted to appeal to Mr. Marsh's sense of patriotism, but in the end Mr. Marsh was swayed by his overwhelming curiosity about the technology recruitment agents were carrying.

The Agency is reserving final judgment on Mr. Marsh's true intentions and overall loyalty to The Agency.
