BACKGROUND INFO:

Kairu, aka Scarab is from a small village in Africa, where growing up as a young girl was hard. She was the youngest in a poor family and had 3 older brothers. Even though it's untraditional in that part of the world, her father decided to teach her how to fight to get her by. Her life changed forever one day when a small group of guerrillas came to her village looking for supplies and new recruits. Kairu fought to save herself and her family, but one of her brothers was killed, and another captured for "recruitment." Things didn't get much better after for Kairu; a year later her mother became very sick. When a UN doctor came to the poor village to see her mother, he saw Kairu fighting men from nearby villages for money, and winning. The doctor saw potential in her to become a professional fighter, and made a deal with her family to bring her back to the US. As she was leaving Africa with the doctor on a small private plane, an Agency contact was there to offer her recruitment. She accepted, under the condition a large portion of her pay go back home to her family. She lives in New York, and is slowly adjusting to the big city life. She boxes in the local gyms there to keep in shape, and is getting a reputation for her unorthodox style. She is an excellent hand-to-hand fighter and has a never back down mentality.
