BACKGROUND INFO:

2001: York made the choice, shortly after 9/11, to become a police officer. Feeling strongly that this was his calling, against his families wishes, York moved to Rochester, NY getting a job as a bouncer while finishing his 2 year Criminal Justice A.A. degree.

2004: Applied to the academy; finished 3rd in his class. FATS session proficiency scores in the 90/95 percentile range. Was readily accepted to the NYPD upon first application.

2007: 3 years on the force. Ordered to turn a blind eye on corruption within the cities government, misappropriation of funds, being shorted man power even though the money was there, and very few concerned about the daily criminal element being sent back to the streets. For York, this was heartbreaking.

York resigned his position in July 2007 with the NYPD. Through a friend still within the force, was directed to The Agency and accepted into it's ranks.
