MISSION BRIEFING:

The Agency is led to believe that the Peruvian leftist rebel brigade known as the Black Boa is regrouping and holding up in a highly fortified compound in the valley basin floor east of the small city of Cusco, Peru. The organization apparently has a new unknown leader that has taken control of the organization. The Peruvian government cannot afford to take any more risks involving the Black Boa and it's new leader and has asked the Agency to quietly eliminate him without the public knowing, so as to finally bring the brigade to its knees. A schematic of the Black Boa Compound, which contains distance and direction, was provided by your contact and is available for further evaluation. Your mission is to sneak close enough to the Black Boa compound during the cover of night from the valleys south basin floor with long-range sniper rifles and silently remove this new leader without your presence being detected. Your team will probably only be able to get a couple of shots off before the compound is alerted, so make them count. Rendezvous with your contact at the designated time and place in Lima, Peru to acquire safe passage over the mountain range and into the valley basin.

MISSION DEBRIEFING:

Mission completed 10:10 pm on 6-16-07.

Agents made their way to Lima, Peru and after struggling with the native language, managed to secure safe passage over the Andes Mountains and later dropped off on the south ridge where they climbed down to the south basin floor. After some much appreciated critical Intel from one of their contact's employees earlier that morning, the Agents proceeded cautiously through the south basin floor, avoiding any and all obstacles that was set in their path. Agents setup their assassination strike zone just over half way to the compound, leaving both Agents a distance of 695 feet to overcome using their rifles. After firing six shots at the unbelievably alive and badly burned and crippled Fernando Sanchez, who was thought killed from the Ground Zero mission, two bullets found their mark and eliminated the current threat of the Black Boa organization.

The Agency suspects that a new leader will eventually rise to power within the Black Boa organization and will have to be dealt with once again in the near future.
