MISSION BRIEFING:

For some time, The Agency has been looking for any information about the organization known as GENISIS. Recently, intelligence has connected a businesswoman in Copenhagen, Denmark with this group, Farnchesca Vincetti, who is also connected to organized crime. Most importantly, she now appears to be looking for a group of expert thieves to obtain an object for her, only calling it "the flower." Your mission is to go to Copenhagen undercover, posing as thieves, and obtain and complete this job from her. The favor and trust we can garner with Vincetti along with the intel we gain could be the first major breakthrough in an investigation that has taken decades. Further information will be provided by your contact in Denmark. Your flight leaves in 1 hour, good luck.

MISSION DEBRIEFING:

Mission Completed: 9-20-08, 7:30 PM Local Time

Team traveled to Copenhagen and almost immediately began blending into the local jazz scene. Partly through their contact, the team set a meet with Vincetti to get the job they would perform undercover. It was at this time the team learned the job was to steal a rare flower from the Isabella Stuart Gardner Museum in Boston. Through surveillance, they also were able to identify a possible rival team of thieves, known as Le Pacte. The team traveled to Boston immediately and began recon for possible ways to infiltrate the museum. A hack of the Museum mainframe proved useful, and security codes were obtained along with an itinerary of the flower itself. Two members of the team traveled to California to attempt an intercept of the flower before it traveled, but to no avail. Agents then returned to Boston and used a well-planned combination of social infiltration and traditional cat burglary to set the job upon the flowers' arrival. This, coupled with a requested hologram device and access codes obtained earlier, the robbery was a fairly easily completed task. Almost immediately afterward, the team was contacted by Le Pacte to meet for the exchange, revealing their association with Vincetti. But at this meeting, which occurred in Boston Common Park, the negotiations broke down. An altercation occurred, and several Agents used excessive force against the opposition, some of who were unarmed. One Agent was taken into police custody for a time. After they left Boston, the team tried to broker something with Vincetti herself and was able to complete the deal, but Vincetti was not happy with the loss of her associates. Although the team did retrieve some financial intel from the transaction, the Agency believes this attempt to begin infiltration into GENISIS has failed. Reprimand will be issued to agents involved and contact will be extracted. Franchesca Vincetti will be placed under surveillance.
